

THE MOMS ARE COMING!

Mom Power Summits

Join Moms Clean Air Force for a series of Mom Power Summits in cities across the country. The events will highlight the importance of mayors and local government leaders taking concrete steps to reduce pollution, respond to extreme weather, and build resilient cities through innovative climate solutions.

Moms Power Summits aim to unite moms, dads, kids, and their families and friends along with elected and community leaders to amplify the importance of fighting for clean air and climate solutions at the local level. Local solutions are especially important at a time when our federal government is rolling back critical health and environmental protections. On behalf of our community's children, please join us to call for policies and practices that put our children's health and well-being first.

WHY WE ACT

Nearly 40% of Americans—125 million people—live in areas where the air is officially unhealthy to breathe, because of air pollution. Despite decades of progress in cleaning up our air, there is much more work to be done.

Moms Clean Air Force is a national community of over one million moms and dads united against air pollution – including the urgent crisis of our changing climate – to protect our children’s health.

Now, more than ever, the voices of Moms and Dads across the nation are needed to demand protection from air pollution and work towards healthy, sustainable communities. Our children deserve no less.

We must educate and encourage our local officials to incorporate policies that fight against air pollution, prepare communities for climate change and protect children’s health. These actions should be implemented equitably across all communities and take care of all residents regardless of race, gender, socioeconomic, or immigration status.
